

M-Tech software launches tablet version of QUICKLOG software

M-Tech Software, the leaders in groundwater monitoring and borehole logging software, recently launched a new version of their primary program, Quicklog, for compatibility with tablet PCs. The software was originally developed to speed the process of groundwater monitoring and will now provide users with a simple way to do their work on location.

Quicklog was first published in 1993 for commercial use, providing groundwater measuring personnel an alternative to complicated proprietary CAD software. Since then, the program has been regularly updated to change with the needs of the industry, now including a tablet version of the popular borehole logging software package.

With the new tablet version, users can work on their logs right after collecting them, rather than waiting to return to the office. The program also allows for "pick lists" of soil description, speeding up and standardizing the data collection process. It also allows users to view borehole logging software diagrams on-site, so they can choose better options of where to dig for the best readings.

According to M-Tech Software, the Quicklog software is identical to the desktop version, so no learning curve is present. Current users should be able to adjust to the new platform without any issues. File management between tablet PC and a desktop PC will also be seamless, says the company.

M-Tech also sells or rents durable, solid cased tablet PCs for use in the field. This can come in handy, as many tablet PCs can be sensitive and crack easily if dropped. With M-Tech's tablets, users are assured a safe and reliable tablet PC that, if dropped, will not break or compromise the software and internal data.

Satisfied customers have been using M-Tech's Quicklog software for 20 years. Says Jack Murosko of ENSR, "Our committee analyzed the major boring log programs and chose Quicklog - QuickCross because of its ease of use and its high quality logs and cross section that it could produce." M-Tech is one of the few borehole logging software companies that began their work long before current technology gained its popularity, and they are one of very few companies that offer borehole logging software.

Quicklog is currently the only major borehole logging software available for tablet PC use. To learn more about the software and M-Tech, visit www.MTechSoftware.com.

Supplement Edge Now Offering BSN Nitrix 2.0 Nitric Oxide Supplement

Supplement Edge, a popular online health and wellness supplement company, has updated their popular Nitrix Nitric Oxide supplement, now selling Nitrix 2.0 to the bodybuilding and strength training community. The supplement features a new formula, including three extra grams of amino acids per serving, for rapid growth, strength and endurance. Nitrix 2.0 has been proven to help build muscle quicker and more efficiently than many of its competitors on the market today.

Supplement Edge specializes in prohormone supplements, commonly used by athletes for muscle building, strength training, endurance development and body fat burning. The supplements are considered safe to use as long as dosage suggestions are followed. Nitrix nitric oxide supplements have been a very popular product for the company in recent months, leading them to develop a new, advanced formula of the popular product, Nitrix 2.0, which retails at $38.99.

Supplement Edge states that the Nitrix nitric oxide supplement is their most convenient supplement to date. The dosage now calls for only three pills, twenty minutes before a workout, and suggests three pills of their popular CellMass 2.0 after the workout for best results. This is much fewer pills than most supplementation programs require, making for a healthier and simpler supplementation process for consumers, which has been a demand of the strength training and body building community for many years.

The company has an excellent track record and offers customer service via phone or email. The website's mission statement states that "whether you are info casual weight lifting or full on body building, we can fulfill your supplement needs.". Supplement Edge goes above and beyond the call of duty for their clients and commonly develops new products to replace less effective older ones.

BSN's Nitrix nitric oxide supplement sells for $38.99 from their web store at www.supplementedge.com. Bottles come in 90 caplets or 180 caplets for an extra $25. Many more supplements are also available and the company states that a healthy balance of supplements is always the best way to reach your full potential.

Harris Communications Launches Blog On Cell Phone Repeater Service

Harris Communications has now added an informative blog section to their website. The blog will cover a wide range of topics surrounding the company's business of cell phone repeater services. Harris Communications has been successfully creating cellular repeater solutions for clients around the country since 1990.

The blog was designed to teach visitors and returning clients about the various aspects involved with cellular repeaters. Posts will be made on a regular basis and will feature information on Bi-Directional Amplifiers, Bandwidth, FCC regulations and more. Readers will have the opportunity to engage in conversation with the company via the comment section below each post. Guests are encouraged to ask anything they want in relation to the topic.

Harris Communications is a leader in the cellular repeater services industry and has been serving both the United States of America and Canada since 1990. The company's main focus is providing solutions for companies that need amplified cellular phone service within their buildings and offices. Harris provides all the equipment, installation and servicing of cell repeater products.

Many structures are built with thick, heavy materials, such as concrete and steel. These materials can make it impossible for cell phone signals to flow throughout the building. With no cell service, business can be slowed or even stopped altogether. Harris Communications provides the tools necessary for a structure to experience full powered, free flowing cell coverage all throughout the structure. Every type of building is capable of having this type of free flowing signal strength, but it takes special hardware and calibration to create it.

The Harris Communications website also features a case study page where they detail many success stories from the company's past. Their hardware and service have provided cell repeater solutions for hospitals, universities, hotel chains, tech support centers and green technology offices just to name a few. Harris has gained a great track record over the years as a reliable option for this kind of service, as proven by the wide range of case studies.

To learn more about Harris communications, their blog, their case studies or how to obtain their services, visit their official website located at www.harriscommunications.net.

Microfiber Tech Offers Rewards System

Microfiber Tech has launched a rewards program to provide more value to their customers. The company, which specializes in wholesale microfiber towels, has a long track record of offering discounts and specials to their customers. The rewards points system will add extra value to every purchase made by the consumer on the web site and entice consumers to come back in the future.

The rewards points system allows customers to gain one point for every dollar spent at Microfiber Tech. Points can be redeemed on future purchases at the rate of five cents per point. The web store will require a minimum of one hundred points, or a five dollar value, for the points to be spent on a purchase. Points can be spent on anything available on the Microfiber Tech web site, including wholesale microfiber towels, mops and cloths.

Many online web stores have taken to the approach of a points and rewards system. As a leader in wholesale microfiber towels and cloths, Microfiber Tech hopes to keep their popularity on the rise with the new points system. Adding value to every order will not only lower the out of pocket expense for their customers, but will also give visitors a good reason to come back in the future to spend the points that they have earned from their previous purchases.

Microfiber Tech has been a major force in wholesale microfiber towel sales on the web for quite a while. The company specializes in microfiber wholesale products, a very limited niche market. The company works closely with manufacturers to obtain the best deals possible so their customers can save more on the products they require.

Microfiber tech offers a wide selection of towels, cloths, mops and other types of fabrics. Customers can order in any quantity they wish, shopping on an individual basis or making a purchase for their business. Custom ordering is also allowed, depending on the quantity and the product that is required.
